Phases

1. Scripting

- At the core of every video is a story – yours or your audience's.

Our goal is to distill the emotional core of that story, as well as its most vital facts, in order to engage your audience in a way that feels authentic to them and to you.

- Our scripting process is collaborative...

We believe that you don't quite know what works best until you see it on the page, so the best scripts come from an exchange between our team and yours.

- Every project begins with a kickoff call.

We'll discuss your vision and your message, your brand and your voice. We'll ask lots of questions to get to the heart of your project, and start scripting as soon as the call ends.

2. Production

- A standard video package includes 3 rounds of production revisions.

After 3 stages have been completed, we are happy to provide additional revisions at an hourly rate.

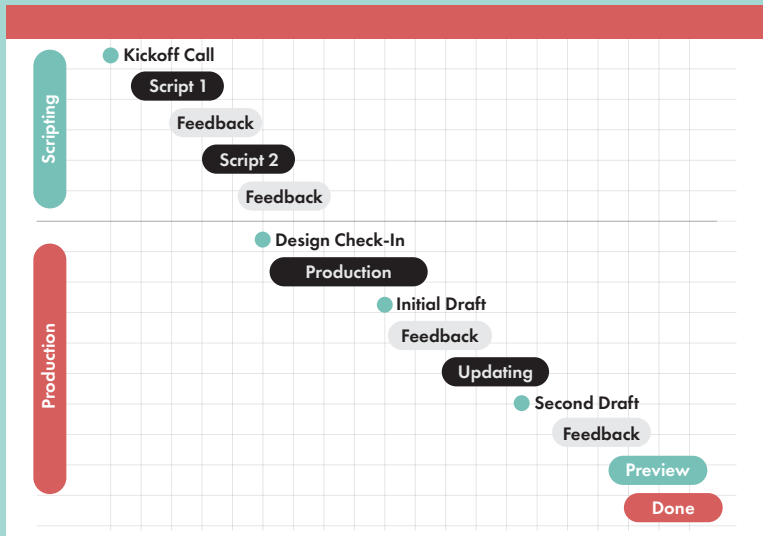

- Revision is a progressive process.

This means that the first draft is an opportunity to identify every video element (audio, art, animation) that you'd like to change. Rounds 2 and 3 will focus on those areas identified in Round 1, in order to efficiently fine-tune every layer of the product.

We can produce a video in as few as 24 hours.

It's a point of pride. But if you've got the time to let a project percolate, why rush? For any timeline shorter than 20 business days, rush rates apply.

Process Overview

Kickoff Call

Over a 30-60 minute phone call, you and the NDA story team will discuss your vision for the video.

We'll discuss objectives, key messaging, visuals, any idea at all...

We'll expand on the notes you've provided in the new client questionnaire.
(which you filled out to begin the project)
